

Bagheera's Free Endangered Species Photos for Students Use Information

- 1) These photos are free for download for students to use on their student projects. These images are not for use in any “commercial” projects.
- 2) To download a photo, just click on it, and when it pops up you can “right click” and then choose “save image” and then save it to your computer. When using the photos, you must leave both the name of the animal and the “courtesy” credit to Bagheera.com in the image. In other words you may not edit those out.
- 3) Along with your student projects, you may also use these photos to send to your friends (or someone else you think might like them or should care about endangered species).
- 4) You may download as many of these photos as you want.
- 5) All photos were taken by Endangered Species Journalist Craig Kasnoff. You do not need to either credit or acknowledge that in your projects (I just thought you might want to know that).
- 6) If possible, please use them to promote the plight of endangered species.
